

ALFRED T. DICKENS'S FUNERAL AT TRINITY

Church crowded to pay tribute to the memory of the son of the novelist.

MANY FLORAL TRIBUTES

Wealthy Vicars as Honorary Pallbearers To Be Buried in London.

The Trinity Church, where Charles Dickens' son Alfred was educated yesterday at the funeral service of his son, Alfred Benjamin Dickens. The casket was placed in the vestry directly at the entrance to the church. It was covered with lilies. Around the altar of the church were masses of flowers. The organ played the whole of chorals "Faith, Hope, Love" before the casket was taken to the altar.

The Rev. J. W. Sutton read the lesson and the funeral anthem was sung by the Trinity choir. The prayer for a stranger in a foreign land was said by the rector, the Rev. Dr. William T. Manning, who also offered a prayer at the church vault on Broadway and 155th street, where the body was taken after the service to await instructions for disposal from the late Dickens' daughter, Miss Kathleen Dickens of Melbourne, Australia. The coffin was placed in a simple outer casket bearing a copper plate with the inscription, "Alfred Benjamin Dickens. Died Jan. 2, 1912," and the vault was closed temporarily.

Dr. Manning and the vestry of Trinity Church offered to the family a burial plot in the Trinity Cemetery.

Ambassador Whitelaw Reid, who arrived Friday on the Louisiana from Liverpool, was in time to be one of the pallbearers, walking with Andrew Carnegie. The other pallbearers were A. Barton Hepburn, president of the Chamber of Commerce; Henry Clews, ex-Chairman of the New York Robert C. Moton, former president of the Republican Club; Courtney W. Bennett, British Consul-General; James S. Alexander, J. B. Pond, H.H. Hammann, comptroller of the Trinity Corporation; Thomas L. James, president of the Life Bank; McEvily Stone, president of the Associated Press; Lee Keeck and William C. Glass, the joint managers of the late Mr. Dickens' lecture tour in this country.

Many Englishmen and members of the St. George Society were present at the service and many members of Wall Street banking houses attended. The relatives of Mr. Dickens, who were present, were his sons Frank and M. G. Lawrence of Pelham, N. Y., the Boston city that was represented by its secretary, Addison L. Winslow, and by Herbert Jenkins, the Dickens Fellowship of New York, a branch of the London Fellowship, was well represented by its members and telegrams were received by various associations expressing sorrow for Mr. Dickens' death. Among these were the Chicago Woman's Outdoor Art League, where Mr. Dickens lectured recently. The St. Louis Dickens Fellowship sent a wreath of squirrel geraniums, the flower of the Dickens family, other wreaths were given by the International Federation, Mrs. Carlo Pernigatti, formerly Kate Dickens' Henry Lewis, Frank and J. N. Tat of Philadelphia.
